

February 28, 2026: On Inhumanely Forcing Control Over the Circumstances

I am witnessing a definitive need to control the circumstances without regard for what the specific elements of the circumstances are that need to be controlled.

For example (in the micro): Representative Learns of Life-threatening Diagnosis

A Republican who may have a terminal diagnosis has been asked to hold onto his congressional seat to help the GOP cling to control on Capitol Hill.

Representative Neal Dunn of Florida may have a terminal illness, Speaker Mike Johnson told a group of GOP donors at a retreat in Florida on Friday, Punchbowl News first reported.

Dunn, 73, has said he will not run for reelection.

As a group of people responsible for humanely governing the 'will' of the American people, do you:

A) Recognize the humanity, and concerns for the human factors, of this terrible news are more important than asking this person to continue performing duties that will draw him away from his family and loved ones while at the same time becoming more and more incapable of representing his constituents; or

B) Override the humane elements of this life and ask (or force) him to continue serving his term in order to ensure that your party's viewpoint has more votes than the other party's viewpoint that opposes you?

The same question is similarly presented in the following macro-scale examples: Are humanity and humaneness being ignored and made inconsequential to 'Murica's absolute need to remain in control of the entire circumstances (while actually only needing to adjust or modify a limited aspect of the circumstances)?

After Venezuela, Cuba is in Trump's crosshairs as he moots 'friendly takeover' or Caribbean island

Amid an intensified oil blockade against, US President Donald Trump has floated the idea of a 'friendly takeover' of the Caribbean nation.

In recent weeks, Washington has effectively choked off much of Cuba's oil supply. After the US captured Venezuelan leader Nicolás Maduro — a key ally of Havana — shipments of subsidised Venezuelan oil to the island drastically came down. To worsen matters for Cuba, Trump then signed an executive order threatening tariffs on countries that supply oil to Cuba.

The consequences are stark. Frequent blackouts, food shortages and a struggling tourism industry have left the island's 10 million residents grappling with worsening conditions, reported NYT. The United Nations has warned that the US measures risk violating international law and worsening humanitarian suffering, the report further stated.

"We're not thrilled with the way they're negotiating," Trump said. "They cannot have nuclear weapons."

"I'm not happy that they're not willing to give us what we have to have," Trump said, referring to that condition.

I will point out at this point that this is the type of conduct that should disqualify a nation from possessing nuclear weapons. None of this is defensive. All of this conduct is aggressively intruding into the sovereign territory of a foreign power. None of these nations attacked the U.S., Congress has not waged war, and the People are not driving this agenda in any way.

'Intimidation Won't Change Our Position': Anthropic Hits Back At Trump

Anthropic vowed to sue over the "intimidation" and insists its technology should not be used for the mass surveillance of US citizens or deployed in fully autonomous weapons systems.

"No amount of intimidation or punishment from the Department of War will change our position on mass domestic surveillance or fully autonomous weapons," the company said in a statement Friday.

The Pentagon counters that it operates within the law and contracted suppliers cannot set terms on how their products are

"I am directing EVERY Federal Agency in the United States Government to IMMEDIATELY CEASE all use of Anthropic's technology. We don't need it, we don't want it, and will not do business with them again!" Trump said in a post on his Truth Social platform.

"Anthropic better get their act together, and be helpful during this phase out period, or I will use the Full Power of the Presidency to make them comply, with major civil and criminal consequences to follow," Trump added.

To whom this may concern: This is extremely volatile behavior.

These constant threats against everyone, near and far, are damaging the United States of America in ways that cannot, and will not, ever be repaired.

Republican Party, USA Military:

'Silence is compliance.' You are complicit in these matters and have a duty to restrain these behaviors before they cause further damage!
